THE DAILY

PACIFIC COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER

SIX-PAGE EDITION

Be just and fear not;
Let all the ends thou aim'st at be Thy Country's, thy God's, and Truth's.

TUESDAY, JAN. 12, 1892.

It seems to be settled that John Phillips, R. Lishman and Jas. F. Morgan will run as independent candidates for the road board. In these days of bad nominations this candidacy is a genuine consolation, and gives the weary and baffled voter something to live and vote for!

News received from different sources in Hamakua convey the assurance that the Hon. Mr. Rickard is the people's candidate for Representative in that district. The ADVERTISER has not always agreed with Mr. Rickard on all questions of public policy, but his course in the last Legislature was marked by a straightforwardness and probity not to be mistaken. We sincerely hope that he will sacrifice his reluctance to the wishes of the voters. The path of the honest legislator is indeed thorny, and his task thankless, bringing no reward save the sense of duty performed, but we hope that this subjective reward will be sufficient to induce Mr. Rickard again to sacrifice his personal interests to the public welfare.

THE CITIZENS AGAIN.

The Bulletin has made the wonderful discovery that Saturday the ADVERTISER published an article which was "an appeal to the Reform party to organize," while Monday it "virtually admits that its tacit appeal to its party to organize was unwise."

This supposititious inconsistency in the ADVERTISER is a most ingenious piece of literary criticism. It reminds one immediately of the observation of a German scholar: "Torture is abolished everywhere except in exegesis."

The ADVERTISER said Saturday: "We hear with SINCERE REGRET that the Native Sons of Hawaii intend to withdraw their Noble ticket." "Unless another ticket is nominated, the electors will be compelled to choose between the so-called Liberals and the set of men put up by the Mechanics." Monday it learns that the Native Sons have not withdrawn their ticket, and accordingly commends with moderation the policy of lending their nominees a discriminating support.

Could any two utterances be more completely in harmony?

Neither Saturday nor Monday, nor on any other day in the week, has the ADVERTISER indulged in any dogmatic utterances on the advisability of placing a citizens' ticket in the field. We have treated the matter as one of pure expediency on which there is much to be said pro and con. We repeat that it is folly to risk the election of the Bush-Wilcox ticket for the sake of gratifying personal preferences. The arguments made have not convinced us that the nomination of an entirely new ticket would not be dangerous. We have not, however, denied the utility of some action on the part of independent citizens; on the contrary, we yesterday recommended such a course, and desired, and still desire, simply to make the reservation that any citizens' movement which does not take into account the danger of throwing victory into the hands of the Bush element will be likely to defeat its own ends.

JAPAN.

Japanese papers by the Yamashiro Maru are still largely taken up with the recent earthquakes. A French resident, writing in the Japan Daily Herald, reports the result of a visit to a portion of the districts which have suffered.

He says: "No description can give an idea of the immensity of the disaster, and I could never have supposed that forty days after the catastrophe it was possible to meet with so much misery and desolation."

Of some large districts he estimates seven-tenths of the houses have been destroyed; of others not a single house remains standing, even in the isolated hamlets. The rice in many places is rotting in the fields, for the unfortunate inhabitants running about bewildered are occupying themselves first of all in attempting to procure provisions and the means of rebuilding some sort of shelter. "Terrified by the earthquake shocks which still make themselves felt, and not having any place in which to store the sheaves, discouraged, they leave the harvest to perish before their eyes."

At Ogaki the fire has completed the work of destruction, at Gifu half the town has been burned, Kasamatsu entirely consumed, and so on across a large tract of country. The traveler estimates that with the sickness resulting from privations, the province of Aichi and Gifu will be fortunate if before the end of April, the mortality does not reach a total of 50,000 persons, and that there were at the time of his visit not less than 600,000 persons without shelter.

River banks and embankments have been rent open or thrown down and floods are imminent. Finally he says that if shocks similar to those experienced in the devastated districts were to be reproduced in Yokohama or at Tokyo "the survivors would be fewer in number than the dead."

THE BAYONET CLAUSE.

According to the New York Tribune the sugar clauses of the McKinley bill were inserted in order to "discipline" ungrateful Hawaii, who needed punishment, or at all events a reminder that she is a commercial dependency of the United States, and had no right to object to the so-called "bayonet clause" of a proposed treaty.

As to this particular clause which gave such a handle to the self-styled patriots, we may say, as we have said before, that it matters little whether it be inserted in or omitted from any treaty, for the fact is that no national ship of the United States or of any European power will suffer its fellow citizens or their property to be for one hour at the mercy of such "revolted tapsters and ostlers, trade-fallen" with whom Falstaff himself would have refused to march, and yet who were led or cajoled by Mr. Wilcox into marching through the streets of Honolulu and making war on the government of the country in 1889, and now the same man threatens to reproduce the same play.

It is no novelty for the Hawaiian Government to appeal to foreign powers to assist in keeping the peace. At the time of the election of the late King Kalakaua, order was maintained in this city by the joint action of American and British forces, though there was then, as now, no foreign element of disturbance, but only the probability of a faction fight in which foreign residents were likely to suffer in person or property. During the time of the whalers, when the harbor of Honolulu was absolutely crowded with whale ships, and its streets with their men, there was regularly stationed here, year after year, three foreign men-of-war: French, American and British, throughout the season, avowedly to assist in keeping the peace, as the police were totally inadequate to deal with, maybe, many hundreds of seamen frequently just in from a long voyage and with money in their pockets. There was no nonsense about bayonet clauses then.

Mr. Wilcox certainly has his own experience to illustrate his position that it is possible to occasion the loss of life in broad daylight in a political quarrel and yet to be not only acquitted by a jury of his countrymen, but to be raised from a mere nobody to a personage of great importance among the clique of Hawaiians who are influenced by such oratory as he treats them to, but he would be wise to avoid such tall talk as he has already indulged in or he may find himself, not in the seat of a President, but in his natural obscurity instead.

HAMAKUA POLITICS.

Representatives and Nobles—Road Board.

Political news with us has been very quiet. It is a little more interesting now. "In the hands of his friends" is a saying as old as politics itself, and generally used to signify that the person is an active and aggressive candidate for some office. Hamakua probably has the only true case of "in the hands of his friends" on record. Hon. J. K. Kaunamano and Z. Paakiki, Mr. Wilcox tells us through your paper, are both good men. They are candidates in dead earnest for a seat in the Legislature, and in fact have been ever since they were distanced in the race of 1890. But they have been "running" without reckoning a great deal on the power behind the throne—the people. These same people on divers occasions, particularly on November 28 in Waipio, have requested the Hon. W. H. Rickard to be the candidate from the district. On each occasion, and on that one in particular, he declined to make the race. Still, not satisfied with the two candidates above named, two petitions, one of native and one of foreigners, were circulated, signed and sent down to the Minister of the Interior, as required by law; which action will place the name of Hon. W. H. Rickard on the ticket, and elect him beyond any doubt, though he has not said he would accept the office after being forcibly elected to it.

There are some things very remarkable about this move on the part of the electors, viz: Mr. Rickard has been one session in the House, which usually makes it very difficult for a man to succeed himself, even when he very much desires to do so; and it is interesting to observe the almost unanimous and vigorous following among natives, as against two good men of their own race.

Hon. J. Marsden will have no opposition as a noble, so that the race for that position will possess no interest, or excitement to speak of. Candidates mentioned for members of the Road Board are Henry Hall, of Kukuihaele; J. Waihinu, of Paauilo; and R. T. Rickard and A. Moore, of Honokaa.

Hawaiian Hardware Co., L'd.

Monday, Jan. 11, 1892.

The first month in the new year; the month which everyone told us would be the "Black Friday" of the merchants' existence has begun and the result of the week's sales is infinitely more satisfactory to us than during the same period last year. This "look out for hard times" cry is nonsense. It may hit some dealers but we've not felt it yet.

It is an acknowledged fact that mud or sand dragged into a room on the soles of your shoes and then ground into the warp of your best and poorest carpets will do more damage in one application than all the moths in Christendom will in a month. Have you tried a Hartmann Steel Wire Mat? This is not the hard, stiff mat which has often been sold as a Hartmann and as often thrown aside as worthless. The Hartmann Mat is flexible, is easily cleaned and statisticians say they last twenty years longer than any other mat. There's no necessity for a cocoa mat where the Hartmann is used.

Speaking of steal mats, are you not about ready for a Fischer Steel Range? They are rushing into popularity as rapidly as any thing we have ever sold and never a bad report of the conduct of one of —! —! hold on; we did have one report that was not quite satisfactory to us. The good house wife told us she couldn't make the range work and she didn't want it. It was a puzzle to us because it was the first one that had not proven "the best thing that the purchaser had in the house." We sent up one of our men with instructions to build a fire in the range and find out where the trouble was, and he found it. There was a clog in the pipe just above the roof and when it was taken out the flues drew so hard that the workman had to put weights on the kitchen furniture to keep the pieces from going up the chimney. The good house wife has withdrawn her complaints and pronounces the range the most satisfactory piece of furniture she has in the house. If this complaint has been considered a blot on the escutcheon of the Fischer Steel Range it has been wiped out and the record is as clean as a new pin.

We know, from actual experience, that you can cook a meal in less than half the time that you can with the ordinary stove or range; we know that they burn just one-half the fuel burned by any other stove of the same size. We don't tell you this because the manufacturer tells us so, but because we have been using a Fischer Range for five years and have found it to be just what we represent it.

Considering the fact that they will out last three of the average iron stoves they are the cheapest stoves in the market.

Begin the year by using one.
